Ride the Underground Railroad with Harriet Tubman and storm the shores of Tripoli. Experience the racism of Woodrow Wilson and the ultimate faith of Abraham Lincoln. Sit on the bus with Rosa Parks and encounter the horrors of religious persecution. Witness Pocahontas befriend the white man and follow Margaret Sanger's journey to eliminate the black man through abortion. From the beginning of time, history, traditions, and stories have been passed down the generations from parent to children, grandparent to grandchildren. In that spirit, Pamela has researched, studied and accounted events from the Flood to 2015's pivotal events. Also included are scientifically supported arguments on controversial social events. Since the Progressive Movement was ushered into the educational system during the Wilson Administration, teachers have shifted to teaching students what to think instead of how to think. Dropped from textbooks are facts and honest, objective arguments that have been replaced by politically correct narratives and carefully collected half-truths. There has been a well orchestrated effort to distort or completely remove the great men and women from the history that built this amazing country. At the same time those perpetrating the evils and dangers of progressivism are hailed as heroes. The goal is to so far remove the people of this country from their founders, the Constitution, and anyone selfishly fighting to preserve them, that we eagerly demand abandoning it all and start over under a progressive umbrella. We are one presidential election from making that complete, fundamental transformation. The stories inside are an effort to preserve and continue our true history. They map out how we got here and what paths lay ahead. They are signposts from the past that warn us of our future. Events from the modern world tied directly to the events of the past. These stories make it clear that if you don't study history you are doomed to repeat it and if you don't understand your freedom, you are doomed to loose it. These are letters written from a Freedom-loving Mother to her daughter, Lady Liberty. They are meant to inspire and warn. They tell the good and the bad of our past so that the next generation can see the warning signs in their future.
