Last Words. Letters and Statements of the Leaders Executed After the Rising at Easter 1916 Piaras F Mac Lochlainn

Printed in the Republic of Ireland, this book is a compilation of the last written words of the men who were executed after the Rising of Easter Week, 1916. It includes also some of the statements made and dispatches issued by the leaders during the Week, at the surrender, and after it, as well as some references to their activities while fighting was in progress. It has been thought well, too, to include accounts, where it has been possible to come upon such, of the last moments of the leaders from the lips of the relatives or friends who visited them or the priests who attended them. Some of the letters herein are being published for the first time. Time was when it was felt that the letters of the leaders to their near relatives were too intimate for them to be read by the public in general, but it will be accepted now more than half a century later, that, having given their lives for Ireland, the leaders of the Rising - as, indeed, all who took part in it - have become part of our history so that everything they did, or said, or wrote, has a rightful place in the annals as well as in the hearts of the Irish people. Those included are: Padraic Mac Piarais (P. H. Pearse), Tomas O Cleirigh (Thomas J. Clarke), Tomas Mac Donnchadha (Thomas MacDonagh), Eamonn O Dalaigh (Edward Daly), Liam Mac Piarais (William Pearse), Micheal O hAnnrachain (Michael O'Hanrahan), Ioseph O Pluingcead (Joseph Mary Plunkett), Sean Mac Giolla Bhríde (John MacBride), Sean Mac Aodha (Sean Heuston), Micheal O Meallain (Michael Mallin), Eamonn Ceannt, Conchuir O Colbaird (Con Colbert), Tomas Ceannt (Thomas Kent), Sea Mac Diarmada, Seamus O Conghaile (James Connolly), Ruairi Mac Easmainn (Roger Casement). Also included are illustrations and a list of illustrations, and two appendices of remembrances.
